It is not denied that the president is very much interested or that ident is very much interested or that he is keeping in touch with the matter through the representatives of the government; but the White House desires the country to understand that any impression that the president is pushing the fight in person is a mistake.

- A dispatch from Newport News said that the German steamer Kronprinz Wilhelm was on last Saturday moved from the dry dock where it moved from the dry dock where it has been undergoing a cleaning, to a position out in the stream, where it was anchored. The captain of this vessel said on his arrival that he would certainly not intern; but would make a run for it. The captain of the Prince Eitel had said the same thing; but when he afterward interned, it was understood that he had only been putting up a bluff to keep the ships that were guarding on the side in suspense. The captain of the Kronprinz may be doing the same thing. It is understood that there are several british and French vessels waiting fo him, and it will be only by a lucky chance if he gets away. Under the rules, the enemy on the outside does ot know when the Kronprinz will t obliged to sail. As soon, however, as the time limit is up the fact must be made public. - The latest report on mortality the "registration area" of the United States, relating to the calendar year 1913, recently issued by the bureau of the census, department of commerce contains some interesting and signi ficant figures with reference to the principal causes of death in this country. More than one-half of all the deaths in the registration area—which in 1913, contained about 65 per cent of the total population of the United States—were due to nine causes: Tuberculosis, heart disease, pneumonia, Bright's disease and nephritis, diarrhea and entertitis, cancer, ap-oplexy, diphtheria and croup, and typhoid fever. The first three of these maladies alone were responsible more than 30 per cent of the total mortality reported for that year. The death rate from these nine causes combined in 1913, was 810.4 per 100,-000 population. This is a material decrease from the corresponding rate in 1910—937.4 per 100,000—when the census bureau made its first annual collection of mortality statistics. The number of deaths resulting from these causes, however, formed a somewhat greater proportion of the total reported mortality in 1913 than in 1900—57 per cent in the latter year as compared with 53 per cent in the earlier.

—Although spring has failed to bring the long-expected "big effort" of the allies against the German lines in France and Belgium, it has furnished three of the most desperate engagements of the war. The first at Nueve Chapelle, where in three days' fighting combined losses numbered 30,000 or more, with victory resting with the British arms. The second was southeast of Ypres, when the British captured Hill No. 60. This involved the most furious kind fighting and after the hill was taken, a bombardment by the Germans for several days. Then bringing up heavy re-inforcements the Germans began an attack around Ypres, which is described as one of the fiercest of the war. This movement was partly in the nature of a surprise and the allies' lines were pushed back for a considerable distance, estimated in some quarters as several miles. Some of this ground has been regained, and according to Paris, the Germans Belgians, British and French, by de-termined counter-attacks, continue to force their adversaries back. The Germans are reported still to be em-ploying bombs containing gas-forming chemicals, and their use is admitted and justified by the Berlin press, one Been newspaper asserting that bombs of a similar nature have been employed by the French and British. The full force of the German attack is being directed against the British front from several directions. British front from several directions and the Canadian troops, who already had distinguished themselves by brilliant counter-attacks when the mans swept the French line, are bearing the brunt of battle. With 750, 000 men on the continent, as announced recently by the British chancell of the exchequer, re-inforcements, doubtless have been hurried forward to fill the gaps in the British lines. In one of its infrequent bulletins, the Belgian legation at London, announces Ypres canal, which was captured by troops and that the Belgian artillery that the town of Lizerne, west of th the Germans Friday night, has been retaken by the French and Belgian has been engaged in a duel with the German batteries the whole length of the Belgian front. The Carpathian situation remains with no notable German newspapers insist that the German fleet has been cruis ing in the North sea. According .to these published reports, the German fleet has been vainly seeking the Brit-ish fleet. The position of Italy with respect to the war, remains as it has from the beginning—one of "armed and watchful waiting." There is much talk of negotiations looking to a Austria-Habian agreement but so far as is known, no tangible results have been realized. - "Trenches and sand bags disappeared," says the British official "eye witness," describing British mine explosions which preceded the recent plosions which preceded the recent attack and capture by the British of Hill No. 60, southeast of Ypres, says a London cable of April 25. "The whole surface of the ground," the narrative continues, "assumed strange shapes. Here it was torn into huge craters; there large mounds of fallen debris were seen. As the the reports of the explosion died away, our men, led by their officers, rushed across the intervening space of some forty to sixty yards lying between our trench-es and the gaping craters before them, the frontier covered by the attack being only some 250 yards in length. Where the mines actually had exploded, nothing was left of the occu-pants of the hostile line, but in the neighboring trenches our assaulting infantry witnessed an extraordinary Many German soldiers, possibly owing to the fact that they working, were surprised while in their shirt sleeves and without equipment. Stunned by the explosions and subjected to a rain of hand grenades they gave way to panic. Cursing and shouting they were falling over one another in their hurry to gain exits communication into the trenches. Some of those in the rear were driving their bayonets into the of their comrades in front of them. The Morkville Enquirer.

Entered at the Postoffice in Yorkville as Mail Matter of the Second Class.

YORKVILLE, S. C.: TUESDAY, APRIL 27, 1915

President Wilson is reported to be devoting much of his time to the study of secret official reports concerning developments in Europe and the suggestion has been made that he is preparing himself for the office of mediator in case the same may devolve upon him. It is quite a natural assumption that he would not go into a thing of this kind without a full understanding of what he is doing.

It is a principle of equity that he who asks for justice must come into court with clean hands. Of course men frequently invoke the law with success while they are violators of the law; but the public sense of decency is never satisfied with such a situation. There is in the heart of every good man and woman a natural suspicion against those who talk of law, while they themselves are under clouds.

If the name of Yorkville is changed to "York" it will take many a day to have the town re-instated in the freeholders who may or may not be maps, guide books, gazeteers, directories and histories, where it is now to the freeholds are located. be found, and there will be confusion in the records for years to come. There are people in the community who recognize the importance of this, and there are others who do not; but disturbance of the name as it now stands will eventually bring home inconvenience and embarrassment to all.

The Enquirer is pleased to ac knowledge the receipt from Mayor John P. Grace of a copy of Charleston's Year Book for 1913. The book contains 476 pages, handsomely bound in cloth and gives a complete detailed statement of the operation of the city government, political and financial, during the year 1913. It contains others and the taking of 45 cannon. much statistical, commercial and his-torical information about the city of Charleston, and is of considerable present interest as well as of literary value.

We have received a copy of the first issue of the Farmers' Tribune of Anderson. It is a six column quarto, published by the "Chesshire Printers," proprietors, and Jno. B. Adger Mullally is named as editor. The copy before us contains no advertisements and the explanation is that although offered advertisements the publisher preferred to get out an issue with pure reading matter. The Tribune contains an approving letter from former Governor Blease and quite a lot of politcal matter that indicates disapprova of the present state administration The paper is to appear twice a week and the price of subscription is to be $1.50 a year.

Anderson has a new newspaper. The Anderson Farmers' Tribune is the name selected for it by the publishers. There is little in the first issue that indicates that it is to be a farmers' paper, bu this will doubtless be the exception to the rule of publishing a about how to raise pigs and calves as usually is done in purely agricultura The idea of the publishers i doubtless that they wish the farme to subscribe to it.—Anderson Intelli gencer. From the foregoing there dently a difference of opinion as to what constitutes a farmers' paper One idea seems to be that the farmers need only to be told about the rafsing of pigs and calves, and another idea has it they should also be told what to do on the coming of the boll wee vil, locusts, the army worm and the like.

Fierce Fighting.

While the news that is percolating through from the European battle fronts is told in the commonplace colorless language generally used in the bulletining of a weather report, it is not difficult to understand that there is now taking place things the description of which would impoverish the vocabulary of Dante's Inferno and still leave the reader without a full comprehension of the pressing upon his attention.

A few weeks ago there was much talk of the big drive that was to take place in the early spring. At that time the contending forces were lying up against each other in long lines of opposing trenches, and the general impression seemed to be that the Germans had their last man at the front, while the situation was only awaiting the arrival of overwhelming British reinforcements to put the enemy to ignominious flight. It appears now that the picture was not truly drawn. That England had nt of and still has hundreds of thousands had of men in training there is no question; but both sides have been bring ing up re-inforcements all the while and it looks as if the Germans are one additional man, maybe more, for every new man brought up by the English. During the past week there has been terrific fighting between the Ypres river and Yser canal in northern Belgium, and that fighting is going for the Germans quickly recovered on now. The evident objective of it all Soon the German is the control of the British channel and our whole pored in the smoke lies and partly by the Germans, and Ypres have borne the brunt of repeat-Meanwhile, our so tremendously important for offense ed heavy attacks which they have against or defense of England. The English have made terrific attacks that have been partially successful ation, which has demanded the exer and the Germans have partially pushbattle ed these attacks back. The notwithstanding their being marked with trenches and wire entanglements, are moving back-ward and forward, and the whole country is being strewn with the dead of combatants by the thousands and thousands. How long it is going to last there is no telling. It seems impossible that the carnage could continue for many Despite losses which left the hill side covered with dead, the enemy continued his pressure during the whole of Sunday, until we gradually were during the control of numbers, and in a few days. Sunday, until we gradually were driven from the southern edge of the hill. At 6 o'clock p. m., re-inforcemnts reached our line and swept the Germans from the foothold they had gained. What our troops withstood of the day, it is evident that the "big can be realized if it be remembered drive" is on. The slaughter during space fought over during four the past week has been more exten sive and more horrible than the slaughter of last fall in the same lo But the worst of it is that there is every reason to suppose that the fearful carnage is only reaching its height.

Very likely the next few days will say whether the allies are to retain control of the coast of the channel or whether the coast of the channel is i control of the Germans.

Freehold and Freeholder. Because the subject is to the for ocally, a few words explanatory as to the meaning of freehold and freeholder will be especially appropriate. A "freehold" in law is a holding of tenure of real property, and a "freenolder" is the holder of that tenure. Anyone, male or female, twentyone years of age, and not laboring under disabilities prescribed by statute, may be a freeholder.

A number of people may have in erests in the same freehold; but "the freeholder" is understood to be the ndividual, firm or corporation in whom or in which the title or fee is rested.

In the case of a corporation, including many stockholders and owning real estate, there would be but one freeholder. The case of a firm or an unpartitioned estate would be the same.

The laws of South Carolina recognize the freeholder as having certain rights and privileges in matters affecting real estate, which rights and privileges are not accorded to nonfreeholders. It is not assumed that there is any unjust discrimination or favoritism in the proposition for the price for the commercially mixed. eason that the non-freeholder has when he becomes a freeholder he falls he freeholder.

For political purposes the statutes recognize various distinctions among freeholders, these distinctions applying in particular cases in accordance with the end to be accomplished.

These distinctions include (1) "Freeholder." (2) Freehold voter. Resident or non-resident free

The first term simply means the wner of a title to real estate. The econd term means the owner of a title to real estate who is also a qualifid voter. The third is used when it is desired to discriminate as between citizens of the community in which

THE THEATRE OF WAR.

Developments At the Front As Summarized From London.

Five days of almost continuous fighting in that part of Flanders of which Ypres is the center, has brought no end to the battle which began with a forward sweep of the Germans over a distance of several miles.

The booming of heavy guns was heard in Holland Monday with greater force than on any preceding day, while all the official reports indicate there has been no cessation of the German assaults, by which they hope to push their way through the allied lines, or of the allies' counter-attacks. German headquarters tells of the capture of 1.000 Canadians and 4.000 The British war office says the readjusted British line now runs to the south of St. Julien, which is in the hands of the Germans, and adds that evere fighting continues northeast of Ypres, although "the general sitution remains unchanged."

The French war office, charging the Germans with still employing asphyxi-ating gases for which a protection has peen found, claims considerable progress to the north of Ypres. That the losses have been great is dmitted. Because of the flat nature of the country, it is proposed to utilize great bodies of troops, and the pattle promises to be long drawn out and sanguinary. The Germans are also attacking Le Eparges, which fell into the hands of the French, April 10, and they have gained possession of the summit of Hartmanns-Weilerkopf in the Vosges.

It is apparent that the whole battle front in Belgium and France again nas taken first place in importance in he war.

Under cover of the fleet, the allies have disembarked an army on the European side of the Dardanelles and a general attack on the straits has been egun by land and sea. British Statement About Ypres.-The British war office has issued the following statement respecting th pattle around Ypres: "First, severe fighting northeast Ypres still continues, the general sit ation remaining unchanged. Our lef dank in re-adjusting its line to mee the altered conditions due to the orig-inal forced retirement of the French had to face to the north and to extend to the west beyond St. Julien. "This extension weakened our line for a time, and after a gallant resist ance by the Canadians against supe rior numbers St. Julien was captured by the enemy. Our lines now run south of that place.

"Second, our troops to the east ed heavy attacks which they stubbornly opposed throughout throughout the battle, in an entirely unexpected situ cise of gallantry and fortitude by the men and quick resource and other military qualities by their command-

"Third attacks also were delivered yesterday by the Germans on the east of the Ypres salient. In spite of the use by the enemy of asphyxiating gases, the attack was repulsed and Ger man officers and men were captured. "In the fighting during the last three days we have inflicted heavy casualties on the Germans. Our loss-es also have been heavy. The German wireless report that four English heavy guns captured is untrue.

full right to become a freeholder and courthouse are under more or less day morning, and addressed a union general consideration in Yorkville, heir to all the rights and privileges of and the understanding is that the event will take place during the first week of July. It was suggested in the town council some time ago that that body take the initiative in the matter; but the idea was not unanimous, and although no definite action was taken, there was a suggestion that it would probably be better to leave the matter of arrangements with the secretary of the "Board of Trade."

It is quite probable that there will be a composite programme that will include a Fourth of July celebration, a home-coming and a courthouse dedication. The York county bar will probably arrange the programme for the dedicatory exercises, and while The Enquirer has not been presented with any specific facts in regard to the matter, it understands that present plans contemplate a gathering of the bench and bar of the state on the occasion. As yet, however, there ap-pears to be no definite representative administrative authority in charge of any part of the proposed celebration.

With reference to the petition filed with the town council for the purpose of calling an election on the question of changing the name of the town of Yorkville to York, it is proper to say in the first place that whenever the first Monday in May, for the purpose canvassers found reluctance on the of issuing certificates to those who shall be a freeholder to gight they took of issuing certificates to those who part of a freeholder to sign, they took may be entitled to receive the same occasion to explain that the signing and who have not yet done so. There were other ladies who signed the petition in full sympathy with those who desire to change the name, and who expressed a wish that they could be allowed to vote. A majority of the 76 qualified voters who signed the petition for the election is in favor of the change; but quite a respectable minority of these voters told the canvassers at the time that they did not want to change the name of the town and that they vote against such change.

There was a story in The Enquirer about two years ago describing the home and farm of Mr. J. Alex Williford of the Mt. Holly section of the county. The story was evidently one of unusual interest because it was ex-tensively copied. It described Mr. Williford's early handicaps and his rise in the agricultural and business world, and showed a record of achieve ment and success that was well cal culated to excite the spirit of generous emulation in the hearts of ambitious youth. There was only one part of the story that the editor of The Enquirer did not like, and this was wher Mr. Williford was described as having reached a point where he seemed in clined to sell off his lands and retire to a large extent from his agricultural activities. Mr. Williford was in Yorkhour in The Enquirer office.
